3- Visual Brainstorm- what do you already know?

The text to the left (1) is a Wordle visual brainstorm of all of the main components of the word research; the larger the words are, the more commonly they are associated with the definition of research.

You can use the bottom or reverse of this page, or use a different page altogether. You could put your topic in the middle and then spend 10-15 minutes recording everything you know about your topic, especially what you consider are the most important aspects (yours may probably look like the second image (2), but you may wish to write the important words larger like the Wordle). You could also draw your responses. Next week we will be in a computing room producing our own Wordle visual brainstorms from various information sites (you will see how effective and useful this is) and then compare them to our own brainstorms today. Good luck!
